I am a shy girl, so I am afraid to talk to others. It let me difficult to solve the problems, and I can't go out the deep. When I was a kid, I felt everything was so bad. I could not get along with others, and I didn't tell my parents about it. I didn't know what should I do, so I decided to close my heart. After that, I didn't make any friends until I was a senior high school student.

One day, a girl who looked so kind walked to me. I was so confused, and I didn't know what she wanted to do. She stopped the step and stood in front of me. I rose my head and looked at her eyes. She said "Hi! I am your classmate. I want to become your friend." I was so surprised because no one wanted to be my friend before. And I didn't have courage to make friends with others. Later, I nod my head that meant I agreed. She was happy after she heard this answer. Then, she took me to play something new that I didn't try before. Because of this, I would talk about my school-life stories to my parents, and they were so happy to hear that. I finally go out the deep, and I want to thank her for staying with me when I was in the deep. She like a sun shinning into my heart. Now, I think everything is not bad because I have my friends and my parents.
